During a two conference educators who have worked intensively with the multi-lingual toolbox against discrimination in the past two years will share their experiences with policy makers in the field of education. Within the European community there is a growing awareness, both on the level of political leadership and on the level of the everyday work of educators, of the need to counter antisemitism, antigypsyism and racism and to strengthen the democratic values in our societies through education.

Background and aims

Stories that Move was developed by a team of educators from seven countries and is now available in seven languages. The project is a cooperation of the Anne Frank House (Netherlands), Anne Frank Zentrum (Germany), Eagerly Internet (Netherlands), erinnern.at (Austria), International School of Amsterdam (Netherlands), MART (Ukraine), Milan Simecka Foundation (Slovakia), Pedagogical University of Cracow (Poland) and Zachor Foundation (Hungary).

An essential element of the Stories that Move toolbox is the central role that young people have played in developing the project. Their stories are included in each part of the online tool, with 27 interviews offering personal insights from different backgrounds and a range of nationalities. Their honest voices are empowering to young people across Europe.

The toolbox Stories that Move aims to support educators by providing an inspiring tool that combines the special qualities of online and offline learning in a creative and engaging way.

The conference will bring together 60 experts from the field of education from across Europe with a variety of professional backgrounds. The sessions will focus on the opportunities that online learning offers in teaching about different biases and discrimination. Experiences made and insights gained when developing and implementing Stories that Move form an important background to the conference.

The meeting aims to:

- facilitate an international exchange of experiences made with developing and using Stories that Move; sharing dilemmas, incidents and achievements, with a focus on the content and methodology of the five learning paths that together form the toolbox;
• contribute to the wider dissemination of the toolbox in mainstream education to address anti-Gypsyism, antisemitism, discrimination of Muslims, discrimination of LGBT+ and racism in history and today;
• focus on the opportunities that online learning offers in teaching about biases and discrimination; building on the experiences made and insights gained with teachers that tested modules during the phase of development and those that have worked with in the first phase of implementation;
• lead to a sustainable network of experts that will continue to work together.
• include policy makers from educational institutions and governmental organisations to consider strategies for sustainable international cooperation in developing and implementing educational tools.

The outcomes of the meeting will feed into the next phase of the implementation of the multilingual toolbox and prepare the way for impact assessment among educator and students. A report summarizing the outcomes will also give concrete advice to policy makers and educational experts that can be shared with governments and intergovernmental organisations and networks.

Programme

Thursday, 28 June 2018
Location: GLS Campus, Kastanienallee 82, 10435 Berlin-Prenzlauer Berg

The Opening Event will present the outcomes and results of an international youth meeting that took place in September 2013 in Berlin. Some of the 41 youth engaged in this meeting will discuss with experts what challenges they face when it comes to racism, anti-Semitism and other forms of discrimination in their daily life. The outcomes of the international youth meeting are a starting point for the expert meeting.
